form ittanarrar, i.e., IV/3. One could assume defective writings in the first case and assign all these forms to IV/3, were it not for the clear I/3 infinitive atarruru and the fact that the forms i'arrar(u) are rare and are used as if they were presents of I and not of IV. The references cited in mng. 5 may have to be interpreted as I presents, in spite of the vowel u instead of u.

The passage i-ta-ru-ur YOS 10 47:34 is to be taken as a form of tarāru, q.v., on account of the parallel itrur CT 41 10:25, 12:15 and 18.

3. to defecate: if a raven ana pan ummāni ina šasišu i-ḥar-ru-ur defecates while it croaks in front of an army (marching out to war) CT 39 25 K.2898:5, and note the variant i-ár-ru-ru ibid. 3; if a raven ina muhhi amēli iḥ-ru-ur ibid. 9; exceptionally in IV/3: if ravens fly in flocks and pani amēli suḥburuma it-ta-na'-ra-ar-ru wheel toward the man and defecate constantly ibid. 13.

The references sub mng. 1 have been cited previously sub erēru v., those sub mngs. 2 and 3 sub ḥarāru D. The latter were there erroneously interpreted as an acoustic phenomenon on the basis of the cognate verbs cited by Labat TDP 80 n. 152. These cognates, however, are to be connected with Akk. nabāru “to snore” and have no relation to (ḥ)arāru, as the loss of the ḥ indicates.

The difficult group of homonymous verbs (ḥ/w)arāru pose problems which have not yet been adequately solved. An attempt has been made in the distribution of meanings and usages sub arāru B and C which is meant to organize certain aspects rather than to offer a normative arrangement. In view of tarāru “to tremble” a verb (w)arāru of similar meaning (arāru B) has been assumed (irur—irrur/i'arrur). The references in which (ḥ)arāru denotes a physical process are more difficult to disentangle because several meanings seem present, one referring to a process of rotting or putrifying (arāru, erēru denoting the spoiling of grain during the winter storage) and one (mng. 2) for which “to discharge a(n abnormal) putrid liquid” fits in many passages. Only with respect to birds (mng. 3) does “to defecate” seem acceptable. The parallel use of a nuance of ašāšu beside arāru (suggested by the same Sumerian correspondence UR<sub>4</sub>.UR<sub>4</sub> for both verbs and also by the two designations of diseases arurtu and ašuštu) as in [šumma] hašú i-ḥar-ru-ur if the lungs (of the sheep) discharge a putrid liquid KAR 422 r. 3f., and [šumma hašú i-ḥaš-šu-uš] (see hašāšu B) complicates the picture.
